Employment Report

Building on the foundation of MIT Sloan's powerful finance legacy, the one-year MIT Sloan MFin program offers a unique combination of heritage, resources, and relevance to shape the leaders needed to effectively impact the complex global economy.

Our pilot class of 26 graduates — 31% female, with an average age of 23 years, and an average of 13 months work experience — has successfully found exciting employment opportunities.

Graduates from this first class pursued opportunities that were commensurate with their experience level, with the majority accepting analyst level positions, and those with greater relevant work experience securing opportunities at the associate level. The class pursued and secured opportunities across the spectrum of financial careers, including investment banking, investment management, financial consulting, diversified financial services, and operating companies.

"Whenever I ran into a problem or had an issue, I just contacted my CDO counselor and he was always there."
